What would the purpose of the app be?

The purpose of the app is to connect of destitute people with those who can provide support, affordable goods, essential mobile services, and business funding within the local community. It aims to make helping others easy, structured, and accessible from both phones and computers.

How would the app work?

User Profiles: Users sign up as either "Seekers" (those looking for help or opportunities) or "Providers" (volunteers, sellers, and investors).

Category: The app is divided into three main sections: Marketplace, Services, and Business Funding.

Verification: To ensure safety, all users and investors go through a quick verification process.

What useful features could the app include?

Marketplace: A section where people can sell high-quality second-hand items (clothes, furniture, electronics) at very low prices or give them away for free.

Services: A section where specialists can offer home-visit services (like haircuts, medical assistance etc.) tailored for people who have limited mobility or cannot afford standard salon prices.

Business support: A page where low-income entrepreneurs can post their business plans to look for investors, micro-loans, or business mentors.

Location: A built-in map that helps users find available services, goods, or funding opportunities right in their neighborhood.

What would you call the app?

The app would be called "HelpHand".
